As if flowing from a hypnagogic state, the “Solo Exhibition by Kingsley Ng” further draws us into the threshold of consciousness. In a quest for pure aesthetic synthesis, Ng is exploring the interstice of artistic creation, that divine moment where boundaries are distorted and thought, image and form are dissolved in a physical reality that sits just in the middle between possibility and reality.

This Utopian space, this interstice is where dualities are pacified, where possibilities become factual tendencies for something, where these conflicting forces are neutralized in a perfect balance while complimenting each other. What we see is in reality a thought without an image, a series of codes, of axioms that deliberately render visible pure thoughts into rhizomes of reflections.
